Mother Nature's Son, I Got 99 Problems and a Glass Onion: Postmodernism, The Beatles, Mashups, and Copyright Criminals

In 1968, The Beatles released an eponymously named controversial double-album later nicknamed the White Album. This sprawling work is important for its pastiches of musical styles, allusive lyrics, and its use of prerecorded music. This album generated controversy again in 2004 when Brian Burton (Danger Mouse) created a mashup of Jay-Z and The Beatles called The Grey Album. We will use the White Album as a starting point to talk about postmodern art, mashup culture, fair use of copyright, and case studies of musicians who found themselves labeled criminals.

After earning two Master's degrees, he earned his PhD at McGill University in Montreal, where, for the last 5 years, he has been Associate Director of the Evolution Education Research Centre, a partnership between McGill and Harvard University.

Koyaanisqatsi

Directed by Godfrey Reggio, Koyaanisqatsi is described by Leonard Maltin as a "spellbinding, senses-staggering, non-narrative film" so rich in beauty and detail that with each viewing it becomes a new and different film. It juxtaposes natural environments and those affected by humans in a way that suggests "life out of balance" (a translation of its Hopi title), yet without preaching or ignoring the beauty of the man-made world. The score by Philip Glass is riveting and compelling. The film raises questions about the human relationship to nature, the destructive potential of technology, and the chaos and loneliness of the modern urban world. It also can provoke discussions of aesthetic questions through its innovative approach to the medium of film and its creation of a new reality through extensive visual comparisons of nature and technology using slow motion and time-lapse photography intertwined with a "dialogue" of music.
