The Rose, which staged such plays as Shakespeare’s Henry VI and Titus Andronicus, will be excavated from underneath the London silt. This endeavor will take four years and cost approximately $10,000, which will be funded by Lottery money.

The project is spear headed by famous British stage actors such as Sir Ian McKellen and Dame Judi Dench.

Shakespeare worked at the Rose before moving to the rival theater, the Globe. It was built in 1587 on the Thames river in a district that housed such things as brothels and sports arenas. By 1606 the Rose was no longer a working theater.

It’s remnants were first discovered in 1989 where the reconstructed Globe theater now sits. It was heralded as one of the most exciting theater discoveries in London’s history.
