Homey Claus: Okay kids repeat after me. Silent night.

Kids: Silent night.

Homey Claus: Homey's night.

Kids: Homey's night.

Homey Claus: All was calm.

Kids: All was calm.

Homey Claus: All was bright... Bright like that damn light that cop shone in my face. He knew I didn't do it. HE KNEW I DIDN'T DO IT. I said BACK ME UP.

TABLE TALK

Plans are being made to create a town outside of Sioux City, South Dakota where sign language will be the preferred mode of communication. The town will be like any other, with hotels, restaurants, and churches but everyone will communicate using sign language.

The town will be called Laurent after Laurent Clerc, the French teacher who helped to popularize sign language in the United States. The idea for the town came from Marvin Miller, a man who was born deaf, to make life easier and more practical for the deaf and hard of hearing.

Prospective residents and planners began the planning process for Laurent last Monday. The town could be ready to welcome guests as early as next year.

The plans include designing shops and homes within walking distance of each other. Also, each house will be equipped with a strobe light and sirens to alert residents of disasters. This planning should be done by Friday.

So far, ninety-two people have agreed to move to Laurent. This is almost the number needed to apply to become a town.

“We want pioneers,” Miller said. “Just like those who came to live here way back when.”

When the town first starts, residents will most likely work in neighboring cities such as Sioux City but the town is hopeful that it can become self-sufficient. They plan to support themselves by offering lodging and food to travelers along Interstate 90. The town will be a byway for such sights as Mount Rushmore, the Badlands, and the Sturgis motorcycle rally.

Where the Sidewalk Ends
By Shel Silverstein

There is a place where the sidewalk ends
And before the street begins,
And there the grass grows soft and white,
And there the sun burns crimson bright,
And there the moon-bird rest from his flight
To cool in the peppermint wind.

Let us leave this place where the smoke blows black
And the dark street winds and bends.
Past the pits where the asphalt flowers grow
We shall walk with a walk that is measured and slow,
And watch where the chalk white arrows go
To the place where the sidewalk ends.

Yes we’ll walk with a walk that is measured and slow,
And we’ll go where the chalk white arrows go,
For the children, they mark, and the children, they know
The place where the sidewalk ends.
